SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 28.

A DISASTROUS INVESTMENT -A book might be filled with accounts of remarkable vagaries of fortune cropping up now and again. One was in connection with the calamitous fail ure of the City of Glasgow Bask. A young man had been left a legacy of one thousand pounds; and having no immediate use for the money, he paid it into the bank. In a few days he saw an advertisement about a business for sale, and enteriog into negotiations with the proprietor, ended by making the purchase. Singularly enough, the amount required was exactly what he had in the bank; so closing his account, he paid for the deeds and entered into postession. The on'going tensor having no immediate use for the money, invested it in shares in the City of Glasgow Barl. The Lexday the crash took place.

Princiss Stephanie's bridal veil is on view in Brussels. It is valued at $5 000, and 150 workwomen were employed three mouths in its making. It is entirely in point al'aiguille, and the largest piece of work of this kind that has vet been made. It is three yards and shalf long and three vards wide.

The latest wrinkle in gas meters is the patent of a Norfelk man, a price indicator showing in dollars and cen's the amount due for gas.
